Research Profile

My research investigates how digital information environments — particularly alternative news media and anti-systemic counterpublics — reshape democratic opinion formation, polarization, and climate issues. I study these phenomena using digital methods, combining computational approaches (NLP, network analysis, automated classification) with surveys, data donations, and qualitative methods in mixed-methods designs.

Employment

2025–2028 Postdoctoral Researcher, Department of Communication and Arts, Roskilde University

- Researcher on (1) the Carlsberg-funded AlterPublics project (Alternative media & ideological counterpublics) and (2) the Independent Research Fund Denmark-funded #Echopol project (Polarisation dynamics & digital echo chambers).
- Develop research designs combining digital trace data, computational text analysis (NLP), network analysis, survey data, data donations, and agent-based models.

2024 Research Assistant, Department of Communication and Arts, Roskilde University

- AlterPublics project: digital data collection and research design for the Nordic Alternative Media Observatory; contributed to manuscripts and conference dissemination.

2020–2021 Research Assistant, iCourts (ERC JustSites), Faculty of Law, University of Copenhagen

- Developed methodological framework and conducted quantitative analyses; built a large prosopographic dataset and coordinated student assistants and data specialists.

2020 Research Assistant, Department of Communication and Arts, Roskilde University

- VELUX-funded COVID-19/green transition project: survey design, recruitment, analysis, and reporting.

2019–2020 Teaching Assistant (30 hours/week), DTU

- Taught seminars and supported course delivery: Theory of Science for Engineers (ethics, SDGs, scientific knowledge production).

2019 Student Assistant (15 hours/week), City of Copenhagen

- Mixed-method evaluation: 30 interviews + web survey; authored municipal report on civic green initiatives.

2017–2019 Student Assistant (12 hours/week), Department of Learning and Philosophy, AAU

- Supported mixed-method research (MCA, surveys, interviews) and workshop organisation; team output included two peer-reviewed articles.

Education

2024 PhD in Media and Communication Science, Roskilde University

- Article-based dissertation: "Burn it down — Anti-Systemic Narratives and Counterpublics in Digital Alternative Information Environments" (part of the Carlsberg-funded AlterPublics project).

2020 MA in Sociology (cand.scient.soc.), University of Copenhagen

- Specialisation in political sociology.

2017 BA in Sociology, University of Copenhagen

2015 BA in Philosophy, University of Copenhagen

2015 Exchange study, University of British Columbia

Research Stays

2023 Computational Communication Science Lab, University of Vienna

3 months; host: Prof. Annie Waldherr.

Teaching and Supervision

Course organisation and course teaching (selected)

- "Political Communication in a Hybrid Media System" (MA Media and Communication, 10 ECTS) — course organiser and lecturer (3 of 8 sessions), Fall 2024 and Fall 2025 (with J. B. Kristensen).
- "Scientific Methods in Journalism Research" (MA Journalism) — lectures on quantitative and automated content analysis, Fall 2024–25.
- "Digital Media: Strategy and Practices" (MA Communication) — research design and social analytics, Spring 2025 and Spring 2026.
- "Data and Things — Advanced Programming" (MA Computer Science) — large-scale network theory and AI, Spring 2026.
- "Responsible AI" (MA Computer Science) — AI and democracy, Fall 2025.
- "Journalism in war and crises" (MA Journalism) — disinformation and foreign interference, Fall 2022 and Fall 2025.
- "Journalistic Innovation" (MA Journalism) — supervision and examination of groups working with AI and news avoidance, Fall 2025.
- BA/MA lectures: "Journalism and Society" (BA Journalism, 2022), "Interaction, doxa, and networks" (MA Communication, 2022), "Sociology" (BA Social Sciences, 2021), "Trends in Digital Media and Communication Theory" (MA Communication, 2021).

Supervision and examination

- 10+ BA and 10+ MA project groups (PPL format) across the Journalism, Media and Communication, Social Sciences, and Humanities programmes at Roskilde University.
- MA thesis supervision (2 students, Spring 2025; thesis on media polarisation).

Workshops and pedagogical development

- Digital Media Lab workshop series: programming for total beginners (2023–26), social media data collection (Digital Methods Initiative tools), computational text analysis.

- Designed and taught the BA Humanities elective “Social Media and Digital Methods” (2022; 65 students, 8 sessions).
- AI-supported PPL supervision chatbot (CUTL certificate project; presented to deans and university leadership, January 2026), continued and scaled as RUCAI through Digi4Hum.

Earlier teaching

- Theory of Science for Engineers (DTU, 2019–2020): philosophy of knowledge, STS, ethics, UN Sustainable Development Goals.
- Sociological Theory and History of Ideas (UCPH, 2017); Open Workshop on practical learning (AAU, 2018).
